

Nitshill Place Based Programme – Update noted.

8 There was submitted a report by John Campbell, Chief Executive's Department, regarding the Nitshill Place Based Programme, advising that

- (1) the Council and partners had a long tradition of working at a community level to address poverty with the most recent approach, entitled 'Thriving Places' having commenced as a ten-year phased programme as part of Glasgow's Community Planning Single Outcome Agreement in 2013;
- (2) they had worked with 10 communities (average population of 10,000) with concentrated poverty, 9 commenced 2013-2016 and a further area, Govanhill added in 2019;
- (3) each Thriving Place has had a unique journey, adapting governance, ambitions and in some cases even the geography included and early work with What Works Scotland created an evaluability framework for the programme and a common vision "to create more resilient, sustainable communities which are stable, thriving and growing, and people are proud to live in;
- (4) Community Planning partners would work to refine the neighbourhoods to be approached for inclusion in a revised place-based approach which would be based on Intermediate Data Zone areas rather than natural neighbourhoods and partners would need to generate some local consideration of the 'translation' of these boundaries into a meaningful neighbourhood approach for 10,000-15,000 residents per neighbourhood; and
- (5) there would be continued discussions with Community Planning partners on the resources required.

After consideration the Partnership noted the report and raised concerns and questions that were addressed by J Campbell.
